"Kurenai" was first produced in 1954 by Paramount Pictures and was the first movie featuring the famous "waltz" sequence. Part 1: The Priest of The Goddess- King Kong King Kong is a 1977 American original epic science fiction film, directed by Peter Jackson in his directorial debut and written by Willis Goldbeck and Walter F. In many applications, there is a need for electric signal detection and measurement. In the medical field, such applications include X-ray based detection, ionizing radiation based detection, magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) based detection, etc. Typically, the signal detected and/or measured in such applications is very small. For example, the magnetic field created by an MRI scanner is typically on the order of thousands of nano-Tesla (nT).

Accordingly, there is often a need for reducing noise, minimizing errors, lowering cost, and increasing the speed of such detection and/or measurement operations. In the magnetic resonance image formation, a radio frequency (RF) oscillator is used to generate a high power RF pulse. The oscillator is connected to a high voltage power supply system in the MR system which provides the positive and negative high voltage supplies. During the transmission of the RF pulse, the transistors are typically biased at or near their pinch-off points. The high impedance of the RF oscillator causes the power supply to sag down rapidly with respect to the line voltage. This reduced voltage causes the voltage difference between the power supplies to be reduced and, in turn, causes the maximum voltage difference between the power supplies to be reduced. The decreased maximum voltage creates problems in the generation of the high power RF pulse, in that the RF pulse may not have enough voltage (and, accordingly, power) to cause an efficient magnetic resonance. In particular, the reduced maximum voltage makes the current which runs through the high power components of the power supply system (such as the RF oscillator and the transformer in the RF power supply system) smaller. Accordingly, the power lost by the system is also small. This leads to inefficiencies in the power generation system. In some instances, the power supplies sag so low that they are not capable of providing sufficient power to the RF power supply system. Several solutions to this problem have been proposed. In U.S. Pat. No. 6,149,457, Bemis et al. proposed a solution using a capacitor across
