an SPST or SPDT contactor constructed by connecting a pair of mechanical switching contacts together by a separate mechanical linkage or interconnect. The contactors may be located within a separate housing, or may be located within an enclosure, or they may be either inside or outside the enclosure, such as on a panel of switches or on the enclosure itself. In each implementation, the installation of a switch involves connecting an electrical cable to the switch. For example, in a panel that contains switches, an electrical cable must be connected to each switch on the panel. In the case of a switch that is mounted on an enclosure, for example a damper, an electrical cable must be connected to the switch. In each case, the switch is hardwired in place by a technician using an electrical cable to connect the switch to the switch circuitry.
Hardwiring a switch in place also means that any wiring changes made to the switch must be made in coordination with the technician who installed the switch. For example, if a newly required circuit is needed on the switch, or the location of an existing circuit on the switch needs to be changed, the technician must make the necessary changes to the switch itself in coordination with the changes made to the switch circuitry. Hardwiring a switch in place may be less expensive than purchasing and installing a switch that is “ 3e33713323
