In their most positive assessment so far, two Chinese officials expressed "shock" at the severity of the wounds, saying they'd never seen anything like it before. "Such a major case would never happen in a modern, civilized society," a source close to China's government said. The government has sent doctors and health workers to help evacuate the injured and treat the dead, the source said. China's health authority, the ministry, has no information about the cause of the assault. "Our hearts are sad and furious at the same time," said an official at He's hometown hospital in Wuxi, where he was being treated. "There is so much sadness over the deaths." The official declined to be named because he is not authorized to speak to the media. "These are very rare cases," said an official at Wuxi's No.7 Hospital, where the two survived. "The Chinese government is doing everything we can to find out the truth. No one knows how this happened." The Wuxi official said he'd never seen a case of such extreme violence, nor had he ever heard of a public official being attacked in China. In the past, but also in the past, there were two or three cases of public officials being attacked," he said.

"But this is very strange and not common in China." Zhou Yang, the former secretary of the Communist Party of China Central Committee, was stabbed to death on Oct. 10, 2008, by a man who led a group of assault-rifle-toting cultists who broke into his apartment to protest China's May parliamentary elections. Wu Liangye, a top official at the Foreign Ministry, was stabbed in 2006. In the past, officials were attacked with swords, knives and even firearms, the Wuxi official said. But they said that none of the injuries involved bones being broken, such as in the case of the two survivors. "It's the most serious injury in recent years," the official said. Even in the days leading up to the attack on Tuesday in Chongqing, residents said they'd never witnessed a case of death by poisoning like the one reported by the two survivors. For that reason, some suggested that the death toll may be significantly higher. Zhou told a reporter that he and his colleague began having lunch in the Italian restaurant, Chopper, around 3:30 p.m. on Monday. Their lunches turned into coffees and then dinners as the two worked on papers for the party. Zhou is a computer programmer who recently co

You can find out what your teacher's beliefs are and how he or she wants you to handle discipline issues, so that you both can reach an agreement. In the end, it's up to you to let your parents know what you've decided on: will you be using a different or the same discipline system as your other siblings? Make sure to tell them whatever you think is fair and what you are willing to accept. Your parents will be happy that you are making an effort to get along together even if you haven't been particularly good to them in the past. How to Prepare for a Major Pap test . Here are some guidelines for behavior at home, in school and in the doctor's office: • Home: About a week before the exam, your doctor will give you a set of instructions for what to do before the test and what to do afterward. Take these seriously, especially the instructions for the day before the test, to avoid a problem during the test. If you're a smoker, ask your doctor to help you quit, since cigarettes just don't go with this procedure. • School: If a routine dentist visit is part of your school plan, ask the dentist's office about availability and the best time for it. Don't miss school. You need to have a throat culture to find out if you're ill or coming down with a cold. • Doctor: Follow the doctor's advice to the letter, especially if you are preparing for a pregnancy test. Weigh yourself, be aware of what you eat and drink, follow directions and keep an eye on how you feel before and after the test. • Take good care of yourself in general. Do everything that you can to take care of your health and physical condition. If you get sick, you might not be able to do the test. • Have yourself tested. If you are pregnant, have yourself tested by a doctor. If you are a mother-to-be, know exactly when you expect
